Investment Manager's Comment

After a bright start to June on the back of China's decision to widen the band widths for the RMB, markets turned down once again in June as sentiment waned on continued concerns over the state of the global economy. Worries over Spain hung over the markets as did a series of disappointing economic numbers from both the US and China. The weak housing, job and manufacturing numbers have investors now querying whether the global economic recovery is coming to an end as the stimulus measures ease. Despite all these worries Asia and the emerging markets held up much better than the developed markets suggesting there is still some risk on the table. Government bonds holding of the Benchmark rallied on a flight to safety. The holdings in the bond sector helped alleviate some of the losses from our equity holdings, leaving the OPS Hybrid portfolio down 0.61% against a loss of 1.2% for the Benchmark.

The more positive trends we are seeing in the emerging markets makes us believe that there is still a positive bias to the markets but investors are waiting for that bit of news that can spark a rally. July has started positively as focus shifts to earnings which are expected to be strong once again. This strengthens our belief that investors are looking for an excuse to push the markets higher. As long as earnings hold up, and early signs are that they will, we would expect this summer to see a modest rally coming through in the markets which in turn could lead to a traditional strong 4th quarter rally.
